This paper aims to help schools prepare for module enrolment, which opens in May 2018.

1) Capped Modules  This year again, schools are required to review the capacity on all modules that are full in 2017/2018 as part of the module amendment process in March/April 2018 and consider the number of potential students that are offered the modules as an option within their degree programme.

2) Module Choice Guidance
   - Options: Schools are expected to hold degree programme meetings (or pre-module enrolment meetings) usually in week 10, to explain the optional module choices available. Prior to module enrolment starting, students should be given, where possible, details on whether the modules they are interested in tend to fill up quickly or not. Students should be given sufficient information to explore alternative choices should their preferred options become full by the time they enrol online.
   - Discovery modules: A Discovery Themes Fair will take place in Parkinson Court on Thursday 3 May (11am-2pm) where Theme Leaders will advise students on exploring the Themes, Sub-themes and progression routes. Schools should encourage students to attend this event alongside exploring the Broadening/Discovery Themes website which provides detailed information on all the discovery modules that are available.

3) Accessing the enrolment web pages
   - When can returning undergraduate students enrol on modules?

4) A number of tips for a successful module enrolment  will be communicated to students BUT it is important that schools, via for example personal tutors, re-enforce the following message at the pre-enrolment meetings:
   - Students choosing modules with NO capacity limits: (i.e. there is no limit on the number of spaces)
     - Where capacity on optional modules meets or exceeds predicted demand, students should be advised to avoid the first hour of online module enrolment in order to get through the process without any systems delays.
     - It will be quicker and easier if students wait a few days after enrolment opens.
   - All students:
     - Students should
       - only log in once; a second login will log out the first
       - use only one device or computer
       - use only one tab
     - Once modules have been selected and submitted online, pages may take a few minutes to load (especially within the first hour of online enrolment opening). Students should be advised to be patient and not to keep hitting refresh. Refreshing the page at this stage will result in an even longer response time for the individual.
